

Auszug aus radix bei Context XXI

(<http://contextxxi.org/montenegro-anatomie-einer-post.html>)

erstellt am: 28. März 2024

Datum dieses Beitrags: Juni 2002

Montenegro – Anatomie einer post-sozialistischen Balkan-Politik

26. Juni 20.30 h im Queer-Beisl im Ernst Kirchweger Haus (EKH), Wielandgasse 2-4, 1100 Wien (U-Bahn-Station Keplerplatz).

Vortrag von und Diskussion mit Alex N. Dajkovic (Montenegro).

■ ÖKOLOGISCHE LINKE (ÖKOLI) WIEN

Montenegro as a model for the Balkans:
the anatomy of post-socialist Balkan politics:

The current situation in Montenegro in many regards represents the last phase of the realization of the logic that has operated in the entire region over the last period. Analysis of the Montenegrin model therefore reveals the principles of Balkan politics with considerable clarity. Transfer of decision-making from the regional level to the global centers of power accompanied locally with the corresponding focus on national discourse has defined the period of transition. In Montenegro, this process is currently exemplified by the discussion over the so-called independence which is occluding public debate of almost any other issues of social significance.

Lizenz dieses Beitrags

Copyright

© Copyright liegt beim Autor / bei der Autorin des Artikels